

Transcript for Strip

018 — Zombie Go Splat

Panel 1: Theo (white tiger) and Lightfoot (red fox) are seated on the living room sofa, expertly wielding game controllers. Theo says, “There’s something relaxing about making zombies’ heads go splodey.” Lightfoot smiles, saying, “It’s good for working out aggression, I suppose.”

Panel 2: Theo notes, “Some people take out their aggression on bubble-wrap.” Lightfoot glances at Theo, observing, “You mean the plastic packing stuff with all the bubbles? It does make a rather satisfying sound. Like popping caps, without the black powder.”

Panel 3: Raising his forepaw in an excited gesture, Theo says, “Sort of like these nice squishy sound effects when we blow up bunches of zombies.” Lightfoot asks, “You realize, of course, what this means?”

Panel 4: Theo replies, “Zombies are ambulatory bubble-wrap?” Lightfoot leans toward the game, grinning wildly. “Keep shooting that brain matter, tiger.”

